MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

This year, Evolution Europe is falling in a market that is down by more than 10%, plagued by macroeconomic fears, and in particular by the commercial disputes between China and the Trump administration. In such a context, the market favoured "macro" investors who repositioned their portfolios on low-risk companies - but also with lower potential - such as utilities (+2.03% in 2018), after selling companies that performed well in previous years.

Small and mid-cap companies were subject to significant corrections (around 50% in some cases) during the last quarter, in which we have started to gradually reinvest. These include Maisons du Monde, Chargeurs and Groupe Guillin, where we see significant potential for rerating.

The fund's performance was also impacted by several investments, which suffered for specific reasons.

Micro Focus International (Software, UK) costs 200bp of underperformance because of the delay in the integration of HPE (but is nevertheless catching up, +92% from its lowest level, after very good publications). Elis (Services, France) has been impacted by its status as a leveraged stock...whereas this status is legitimate, following the acquisition of its main competitor in Europe. Expectations for Ryanair (Airline, Ireland) have been burdened by the rise of the staff and fuel costs, which are expected to reverse in 2019. Maisons du Monde (Retail, France) was impacted during its most important quarter by the "Yellow Vests" phenomenon, which should not reoccur in 2019.

In total, among the nine companies which impacted the fund by more than one percentage point, only one seems not be able to make up the lost ground: BAT, which has been the subject of progressive disposals.

We believe that the companies in which we have invested have seen an increase in their rerating potential during this period. For this reason, the fund's concentration has increased.

In recent days, dialogue seems to have resumed between China and the United States. What looked like a global recession may simply be a decline in the growth rate of the global economy, which seems normal after ten years of economic growth and declining interest rates. However, we are still careful about economic cycle and liquidity risks, and we only invest when valuations take the worst scenarios into account.

We are optimistic because the valuation multiples are now reasonable; stock picking will be easier, with potential revaluations not seen over the last five years.

Please receive our best wishes for this new year.
