MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

Good macro-economic news flow continues in Europe. GDP increased by +0.6% in the fourth quarter, bringing the euro zone growth to 2.5% for 2017 which has recorded its strongest gain in 10 years.

All leading economic indicators confirm this trend for 2018. Employment rate should keep on rising, investment should start again and companies' margins should continue their recovery which began last year.

Paradoxically, despite a spectacular rise in American equities, we are facing many challenges for 2018. Some signs of slowdown appear in the manufacturing sector and good news about consumers trends could reverse during the year because of the weakness of their savings. The unknown is the inflation dynamic and especially the wages growth.

For now, data show an acceleration. The eased financing conditions for firms, the significant decrease in USD, and the still vigorous economic growth will create doubts about the capacity of the FED to handle this trend.

In line with this American issue, all central banks will have to face these problematics and it will bring questions about their ability to manage not only the monetary normalisation but also the increasing volatility. Indeed, if central banks stay credible, normalisation of monetary policies can be implemented while keeping real interest rates (inflation-adjusted interest rates) low in order to fuel investment and to stay in the continuity of 2017.

If this is not so, loss of credibility will lead to a significant hike in risk premiums, potentially strong interest rates movements and a substantial derating.

We retain the first scenario in our analysis but we are convinced that doubts about central banks' future actions will bring volatility on which we will have to build. We hedge a large part of the fund's sensitivity. Looking at investment themes, we strengthened the financial sector (increase in interest rates), oil stocks (world growth) and we continue to develop our generation Y theme (Wessanen, Renault).
