MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

In September, Evolution Europe is up approximately 3%, below the strong performance of its benchmark. Some of our largest holdings had a disappointing month, including Ryanair (Ireland, airline, €20bn) and Reckitt Benckiser (UK, staples, £48bn). We view this share price weakness as temporary and still believe their assets, strategy, and management to be of exceptional quality. Among our best performers we find – despite Brexit noise! – a UK company, B&M European Value Retail (UK, retail, £3.9bn).

The "European" part of its name could seem misleading as 90% of the business is in the UK... except if you consider their ambitions in terms of geographical expansion. Indeed, the leading general discounter (which sells FMCG, toys, tools, etc.) in the UK has started its European expansion when they bought Jawoll in March 2014. We believe the nomination of Kathleen Guion to the board in May 2014 to be a clear sign of B&M's international ambitions. Indeed, as an executive VP, she was one of the main architects of US-based Dollar General from 2003 to 2011, when they opened up to 600 stores per year – i.e. the equivalent of B&M's entire store portfolio.

We think that after a successful attempt in Germany and thanks to a differentiated business model and a strong management team, B&M is ready to accelerate its international expansion. The industry structure is conducive to such a roll-out as general discount is underpenetrated in Europe and there is a distinct lack of either national or European leaders in the space. Regardless of their ambitions on the continent, B&M should continue its national roll-out at a +10% pace every year.

The first post-summer conferences have been good opportunities to meet new companies and to study again previously-known investment cases. We are waiting for the third quarter earnings releases in October to make moves in the portfolio, which still has significant upside in our view.
